DOCTOR DALLOZ

Music is your medicine (c) doctor dalloz 2024

Doctor Dalloz is the stage name used by Álvaro Dalloz, a pioneering guitarist in Spain's independent music scene, when he launched his solo career.

As the leader of two of the most emblematic blues bands in the Canary Islands, Sinelefante and Three Bones, he participated in numerous international events, performing at festivals such as Cazorla, Lucena, Heineken Jazz, Corralejo, and Santa Blues.

In 2016, Doctor Dalloz released the album "Medicine Blues": a self-produced record featuring four original songs. Two years later, the Canarian musician of French descent moved to Paris, where he composed the song "Quelle chanson d'amour," which would inspire his second project.

Today, Dalloz returns to the stage with a vibrant trio formation, alongside Dominique Schlocker on drums and Pao 'Piña Madura' on bass. Presenting a carefully curated selection of original songs that span his various stages, he will offer us his best medicine: music.
